Welcome to the UK where it's now official government policy that you CAN'T publish "misinformation", but The Guardian, the BBC, Disney and Netflix CAN.

Cyberflashing, epilepsy-trolling and fake news to put online abusers behind bars from today

New offences have been introduced to criminalise cyberflashing, fake news intended to cause non-trivial harm and other online...

Yes, it's true – the recently signed “Online Safety Act” brands the publication of “false information” a criminal offense punishable by up to a year in prison...

...unless you're an MSM outlet, when it's totally fine.

Think even the corrupt & bloated criminal class that rules over us would never dare be that blatant?

Take a look at section 179 making it illegal to publish false information with intent to cause harm:

PART 10

COMMUNICATIONS OFFENCES

False and threatening communications offences

179 False communications offence

- (1) A person commits an offence if—
- (a) the person sends a message (see section 182),
 - (b) the message conveys information that the person knows to be false,
 - (c) at the time of sending it, the person intended the message, or the information in it, to cause non-trivial psychological or physical harm to a likely audience, and
 - (d) the person has no reasonable excuse for sending the message.

...and then look at section 180, which exempts all MSM outlets from this new law :

180 Exemptions from offence under section 179

- (1) A recognised news publisher cannot commit an offence under section 179.
- (2) An offence under section 179 cannot be committed by the holder of a licence under the Broadcasting Act 1990 or 1996 in connection with anything done under the authority of the licence.
- (3) An offence under section 179 cannot be committed by the holder of a multiplex licence in connection with anything done under the authority of the licence.
- (4) An offence under section 179 cannot be committed by the provider of an on-demand programme service in connection with anything done in the course of providing such a service.

...and that's without even getting into OfCom's “select committee”, or how they choose to define “misinformation” (s. 152)

Welcome to the modern definition of “freedom of speech”, where the MSM are directly and explicitly permitted to “knowingly publish false information with intent to cause non-trivial harm”, and you can be sent to jail for a year for calling out their lies.

Oh, and it looks like our friends across the pond might not be far behind. The Big Tech Senate hearings started yesterday, and social media executives are already throwing their support behind the new “Kids Online Safety Act”.

With the EU’s own Digital Services Act coming into force later this month, and all the focus on “misinformation and disinformation” at Davos two weeks ago, we can see the real crackdown on internet free speech is about to kick into gear.

Good times.
